

I occupied the hole area of the composition to do my portrait and I used all the 9 values from my value scale. My portrait does break the values into a flat plane. The grid was used to locate the shapes in each place and in that way keep the proportions of the face. I covered all the outlining facial features. I would say that it was executed in a professional manner, but it was a little mess with the glue I used.